Cherry Hills Village Art Commission (CHVAC) is proud to announce that on Friday, July 13th their sculpture-on-loan program continued with the installation of Big Bronze Walking Eye Flower at the northwest corner of Quincy Avenue and University Boulevard. The sculpture, by world-famous Colorado-based artist James Surls, is made of stainless steel and bronze, weighs 1,100 pounds and stands almost 18 feet high.

The installation went quickly due to the expertise of the Cherry Hills Village Parks staff (Jeff Roberts, Kevin Johnson, Doug Wylie and Carrie Furtek). This large sculpture was installed in just a few hours, using a simple lift. CHVAC Chair Ann Columbus was on hand to observe the installation, stating that, "We are so grateful to have such a talented and dedicated staff capable of installing this piece so smoothly." Also on hand was Tai Pomara of James Surls Studio in Carbondale, Colorado. He reminded us that the installation of this piece was relatively easy compared to its installation on Park Avenue in Manhattan. "For that install, we had to block two lanes of traffic along Park Avenue for the whole day," said Pomara.

The sculpture will remain on display for two years. Surls' work is often organic in nature inspired by the natural landscape. Big Bronze Walking Eye Flower was selected by the CHVAC for its energy, its organic nature and its beauty. "We sought out the best Colorado artists available for this temporary commission and were thrilled and amazed that we could acquire a loan from this noted artist, James Surls. We encourage you to take note of this magnificent piece as you walk, ride or drive along Quincy Avenue," stated Polumbus.

AUGUST 2018
MAYOR MUSINGS

Originally I was going to write about the War of the Roses (not the English Civil War that was similar to Game of Thrones, except bloodier and without dragons), but the war my roses are engaged in with Japanese beetles. As interesting as that may (or may not) have been, something very important has taken its place.

After extensive lobbying and negotiations with the cell and broadband industry, the Colorado State legislature passed a law permitting the placement of poles and related equipment within municipal rights of way, with an expedited permitting process. This new legislation gives municipalities limited rights to implement laws protecting aesthetics and public safety. Our Village acted quickly to make sure that within the requirements of state law neither poles nor equipment could be placed to interfere with driveways or trails and that associated equipment would be undergrounded.

Our requirements were consistent with several Colorado jurisdictions; among them the City of Centennial who has worked closely with the major carriers to implement reasonable standards acceptable to all parties.

These same carriers have now introduced legislation in Congress which would give the industry carte blanche to erect poles and associated equipment in the municipalities' rights of way, with no input from the local community on safety or aesthetics.

As set forth in the new state law pertaining to cellular and broadband, the Village can make sure that poles and equipment are installed to minimize impact on sight lines and trails. Most importantly we can require that equipment be undergrounded; which can be as large as a delivery truck.

If Congress passes the proposed legislation, specifically eliminating all state and municipal control regarding the placement, aesthetics and maintenance of poles and equipment, the appearance of our Village could change considerably. The Federal legislation is about profit, not about access to service. The Colorado legislature worked hard to create a balance. There is no balance under the proposed Federal legislation.

Soon poles and equipment will be as ubiquitous as Japanese Beetles. One is an invasive species caused by careless importers, the other by Congress that could care less.

Respectfully submitted,
Laura Christman, Mayor

QUINCY FARM - Understanding The Historic Designation And The Conservation Easement

Ahead of the Quincy Farm Open House, it's helpful to explain the farm's Conservation Easement and the National Historic Register designation. Both guide planning and decision-making for the property in slightly different ways. This article is just a small snapshot of the complexity of managing this historic farm.

The Conservation Easement Catherine H. Anderson placed on the property ensures the farm cannot be developed in the future, and that it will be managed consistent with a set of Conservation Values. The easement is held by Colorado Open Lands, a nonprofit whose mission is to preserve open lands and the natural heritage of Colorado. They conduct yearly site visits and answer questions about what can and cannot be physically changed on the property and appropriate uses for the farm.

Quincy Farm also appears on the National Register of Historic Places as the Hopkins Farm National Register District. It is historically significant for both agriculture and architecture. Seven buildings and the farm pond contribute to the designation. To maintain the designation, all of the contributing buildings must be cared for using the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties. These are specific standards guiding maintenance, repair, and sometimes replacements of elements like roofs, siding, windows, etc. Unlike the Conservation Easement, the historic designation is not legally binding. However, following the Standards makes the City eligible for historic preservation grants and preserves important parts of Cherry Hills Village history.

Sometimes, the Conservation Easement and the historic designation contradict each other. The Conservation Easement explicitly permits the City to change or even demolish buildings considered historically important by the National Historic Register. In these cases, staff follows whichever document is more conservative. If you'd like to learn more, please email Emily Black, Parks and Recreation Coordinator, at ebblack@cherryhillsvillage.com.

TEST YOUR GARDENING KNOW-HOW

By Shari Leigh, Colorado Master
Gardener Volunteer, Arapahoe County

For a bit of summer fun, test your gardening know-how with these True or False questions. Answers are provided at the end of the column.
Enjoy!

1. Trees show drought stress through wilting of leaves. True or False?
2. The term "Xeriscape" was coined in Colorado as a gardening method for arid climates aimed at water conservation. True or False?
3. The best time to prune spring flowering shrubs such as lilac, forsythia, viburnum, weigela and spirea is shortly after they flower. True or False?
4. The weed killer Roundup, which contains glyphosate, kills only weeds. True or False?
5. Tomatoes love the heat thriving best when temperatures exceed 90 degrees Fahrenheit. True or False?
6. Lawns should receive less water per irrigation cycle in the fall compared to the summer. True or False?
7. Newly planted trees should be staked. True or False?

8. Plants called biennials live for 2 years?
True or False?

ANSWERS

1. False. Trees do not wilt from drought stress. When deprived of moisture for an extended period, trees show stress symptoms in a variety of ways including leaf scorch, tip dieback, and premature leaf drop. Drought stressed trees may be more susceptible to pests and disease.
2. True. The term "Xeriscape" was coined in 1981 by Denver Water and the ALCC. The 7 principles are:
 - a. Develop a plan and design your yard
 - b. Evaluate and improve soils as needed
 - c. Create practical turf areas based on functional use
 - d. Group plants according water needs
 - e. Water efficiently
 - f. Use organic mulches to reduce evaporation
 - g. Adhere to best practices for landscape maintenance
3. True. Spring-flowering shrubs develop buds in midsummer through fall. Pruning during this period may impact blooming in the following spring.
4. False. Glyphosate, which is the active ingredient in Roundup, is a non-selective herbicide, which kills any plant on contact - not just weeds. When using any herbicide or pesticide, read the label carefully and follow all directions explicitly.
5. False. Tomatoes prefer temperatures below 90 degrees F. Above 90 degrees, blossom and fruit production may stop.
6. True. In September and October, irrigation may be reduced with the onset of cooler temperatures. Reductions of up to 60% in the spring and fall are recommended. Bluegrass lawns may require 0.6 to 0.9 inches of water per week in the spring and fall. In midsummer, water requirements for bluegrass are generally in the range of 1.25 to 1.5 inches per week.
7. False. In most situations, newly planted trees do not need staking, and, in fact, staking can inhibit good growth. Staking is recommended where there is heavy pedestrian traffic such as pedestrian walkways, in areas of high winds and for trees with floppy or non-supportive trunks.
8. True. Biennials are plants that have a life cycle of two years. They develop roots, stems, and leaves in the first year, and flowers in the second year. Examples of biennials are: Foxglove, Hollyhock, Sweet William and Black-eyed Susan.
